JAMES THURSTAN WATERWORTH

The London designer and Soho House alumnus who loves to mix old and new

Who is he? It was never part of James Thurstan Waterworth's grand plan to become an interior designer. 'It wasn't top of the career adviser's list at a boys' boarding school in the countryside,' he says wryly. But his experience with dyslexia led him to crave a creative, hands-on career. This expressed itself as a teenage passion for design books and magazines. 'I was lucky to be surrounded by antiques, too, as my stepmother is a dealer,' he adds. He did an interior design course at London's KLC School of Design and then took on a junior position with designer Martin Brudnizki, which eventually led to a role as European design director at Soho House. Here, he was responsible for the robust comfort and quiet elegance of its properties around the world. In 2018, he set up his Notting Hill studio, Thurstan.

THE LITTLE BLACK BOOK

Every project has its own unique list of suppliers and craftspeople. Part of making it special is finding the right mix and match

ANTIQUES

I've been buying from Nick Jones Antiques for a long time now. Not only is he the loveliest of dealers, but he always has at least one piece that I want to leave his shop with – it could be something as simple as a beautiful 19th-century French glass vase. 32 Church St, Marylebone, London NW8; @nick_jones_antiques

CUSTOM FURNITURE AND FINISHES

When we need a properly made bespoke piece, Rupert Bevan in London is the place we go. He's a trained restorer and gilder, with a rich understanding of materials, and the attention to detail in his team's work is second to none. There's nothing he can't figure out. rupertbevan.com

PAINT

Francesca's Paints is a small but lovely shop that sells eco-friendly and traditional limewash paints. The range of colours is really interesting – being able to play around with unique shades and finishes is very important to me, so we have worked with them on many of our projects. francescaspaint.com

RUGS

The team at London House Rugs has a vast range of knowledge. As well as many bespoke styles, such as kilims, Aubusson carpets and contemporary patterns, there are also antique pieces. For us, the company is a delight to work with as its turnaround is fast and the customer care is incredible. londonhouserugs.co.uk
