

COUNTRY HOMES

& INTERIORS

NEW LOOK!

Style for the home you love

CREATE HARMONY WITH GREEN
THE RETURN OF WOOD KITCHENS
5 STEPS TO A SMART HOME OFFICE

GROW A BEAUTIFUL GARDEN

Fixes for sloping plots
High-climbing clematis
Plant a purple border

HOW TO MAKE THE MOVE FROM THE CITY

SAVE 25% AT COX & COX

A NEW LOOK FOR A NEW SEASON

Life in the country has changed
& so have we JOIN US INSIDE

FUTURE

10>
9 770951 301303
OCTOBER 2022 - ISSUE 278
PRINTED IN THE UK

IN THE MIX

'Historically, timber was viewed as a necessity in the construction of a kitchen and consequently was often decorated with paint to hide it,' explains Matt Prall, managing director, Papilio. Combining exposed wood with colour is a good way to ramp up the impact of a design, especially if bold and deep hues are used to contrast with the timber. Here, the mellow beauty of the oak cabinets is offset by doors in rich Rebecca's Red from Francesca's Paints and a specially mixed deep blue. 'The timber brings an element of softness and nature which, when paired with the paint colours, brings intrigue and balance,' says Matt.